

LETTER FROM GEORGIA.

Thy's Deontological... Meeting of the Augusta Presbytery... Trial of the Rev. James Woodrow D. D.

ED. REPUBLICAN.—I will attempt to give you a few outlines connected with the history of this grand church.

Where is Bethany? a question which has perhaps been asked by all the civilized world within the few weeks.

This historic old place is situated in Green county, Ga., Union point, on the Ga. R. R., being the nearest depot. The centennial programme opened with the reading of the history of Bethany.

This contained many items of peculiar interest. Mr. Livingston, who is now 83 years old, gave many interesting reminiscences of the past days of Bethany. He was born and raised near the old hill and was once an intimate friend of the celebrated Dr. Cumming.

The grand old Scotch-Irish preacher, who once lived, taught and preached here. He was followed by Dr. Jones of Atlanta, who in a carefully prepared address gave some recollections which invest the church with special interest.

He showed that this church has given to the world four ministers of the gospel, all of them learned and distinguished. The first was Dr. Moses Waddell, for years the venerable President of the University of Georgia and founder of the Presbyterian church at Athens.

The second was a son of Dr. Cunningham, born here in 1799. He graduated at Princeton, became a minister and died in Alabama before his father. The next was Francis C. McMurray, born in the neighborhood of Bethany in 1816.

He became a minister after having studied law, and think Dr. Jones stated was now living in Gadsden Ala. The last of this noble array was Lucius A. Simonton who fell a victim to consumption at the early age of 31 years.

Although cut down in the early glow of manhood he had given evidence of extraordinary talent and was said to have a peculiar fascination of manners which made him a great favorite with all who knew him.

The patriarchs of the Waddell family lie buried in the cemetery at Bethany. After the reading of the address Dr. Jones proceeded to give some amusing anecdotes in regard to some of the venerable forefathers.

On Monday morning August 16 the Augusta Presbytery was called to order with perhaps the most important case that has ever been before that body, viz: the trial of Dr. James Woodrow for heresy, or as the indictment read, teaching and promulgating views contrary to the standard and the universal opinion of the church.

The prosecution was ably represented by Dr. Adams of the First Presbyterian church, Augusta Ga. The prosecutor held the vast audience spell-bound for two hours and forty-six minutes, and made a powerful effort. All were convinced from the first that this was a war of giants—the greatest controversy that had ever arisen in the church.

The examination of witnesses consumed all of Monday and a part of Tuesday. The examination was full and complete. The witness fully recognized the ability of the defendant and seemed to quail and cede before the greatest of ecclesiastical congresses. The argument of Dr. Adams and the examination of witnesses having been heard, Dr. Woodrow spoke in his defense. He began by saying that it had been about two years since his ministerial character had been assailed and made public all over the world. This was the day he had been longing to see. Until now the charges of heresy had been repeated without any one until now having courage to formulate them in a church court so that he might meet his accuser face to face.

Whatever the object of this prosecution he thanked the member who had introduced it. The indictment charged that his teachings were against the "universally accepted belief of the church" not against the Bible or standards.

It had been once believed that the word of God held that the sun moved and the world stood still. That was at one time the universally interpreted belief of the church.

It is only by the Bible and the standards that he would consent to be tried. He might hold many beliefs that may be at variance with the universal belief of the church.

After speaking for some length on this subject Dr. W. went on to say: "It is charged that I have changed my views. Yes, Moderators, have not yours? If you have not changed from many things when I first taught you in Oglethorpe University, I will think you have been terribly stunted. Yes, I have changed my views. I have grown under the sunshine of God's truth." Dr. Woodrow announced that the principles of his address were true and would prevail against all opposition. There was no use introducing witnesses here to prove that these were his addresses. He would not repudiate his own children. They were too dear to him.

Dr. Woodrow said that his visit to Europe had nothing to do with his change of opinion. He did go to Europe and visited scientific men and found what men were hinking about, but this had nothing to do with his change of views. Dr. Woodrow took some sharp exceptions to portions of Dr. Girard's testimony.

The latter had said that evolution had been raised for infidel purposes, but did not know that Dr. W. had ever raised it that way. Then why did Dr. G. say anything about it? Why besmirch me with that bad odor? The Bible did not teach evolution—he never said it did. True this doctrine, like many others, did not originate in Christian research. Chemistry might be repudiated on the same ground. Why bring his expert (Dr. G.) so far this not weather to tell this? Even I could have told Dr. Adams this. I will not discuss evolution here. I would consider it profanation to discuss a question of science in a court of the Lord Jesus Christ. I cannot see why Dr. Adams should be ashamed of having been a quadruped.

MR. MORTON.—Will Dr. Woodrow please explain what he means by saying that Dr. Adams was a quadruped?

Dr. Woodrow—I mean that man before birth passes through some intermediary changes. After having spoken one hour and a half Dr. Woodrow took his seat. He had shown himself to be an able reasoner and one that carries conviction by the inexorable logic of his conclusions, and there were but few in that vast assemblage who were not ready to admit that this man had been misrepresented, misconstrued and caricatured to an extent almost bordering upon persecution. His able defense and sound reasoning has won for him many friends in this community and it public sentiment rebounds to the discredit of his accusers, who can say that it is but just.

In this court the decision was given largely in favor of the accused. What the ultimate result may be cannot be foreseen.

Dr. Adams will carry the case into the Synod and it will probably be brought back to the presbytery for a new trial.

The friends of Dr. Woodrow do not entertain the least fear but what he is able to defend himself in any ecclesiastical court in which he may be brought. Of one thing however we feel sure: the world and the church will breathe a sigh of relief when justice is done and the whole thing is over.

Saved His Life.

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., says he was, for many years, afflicted with Phthisis, also Diabetes; the pains were almost unendurable and would sometimes almost throw him into convulsions. He tried Electric Bitters and got relief from first bottle and after taking six bottles was entirely cured and has gained in flesh eighteen pounds, and he positively believes he would have died, had it not been for the relief afforded by Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by W. M. Nesbit.

Saturday night Mess. R. F. Strother, and H. R. Campbell became involved in a difficulty in which Mr. Campbell received a severe flesh wound in his right hip. The difficulty arose about a debt Mr. Campbell owed Mr. Strother. The case will be tried Friday. The defendant is under a three hundred dollar bond.—Gadsden Cor. Chattahoochee Times.

The Atlanta Journal says Judge John K. Henry, who recently died in Greenville, Ala., at the ripe age of seventy-two years, was from Hancock county, Ga., and was one of several hundred talented young men that our state furnished Alabama many years ago, including Pugh, Clayton, Bibb, Sanford, Holzelaw and others, who have won fame and fortune in their adopted state.

After all the crop outlook is not so unpromising. The continued rains of the spring and summer threatened almost absolute destruction to our farming interests; but our planters, while a black, watched their chances and they fell with fury upon the growing grass and cleared it during the brief intervals of sunshine. We have never known farmers to be more active and to work harder, and their toil is being rewarded in a fair crop of corn, and in the rapid growth of the cotton. Should no subsequent disaster overtake the planters of this south Alabama section, there will be an average harvest, and in some instances an overwhelming crop.—Evergreen Star.

The editor of the Southern Sun wants to know why editors cannot be friendly with each other, and demands the fact that in Selma, Mobile, Montgomery and Birmingham editors criticize one another.

Did the editor of the Southern Sun ever hear of the English bishop who praised to a friend the domestic life of a married couple, his parishioners. "Why sir, for fifty years of a married life they never had one cross word." "Then," his friend replied, "they must have had an infernally stupid time of it." No Mr. Howell, quarrels are the life of journalism. It was a wise Greek who said there was one thing that disgusted all men, and that was to hear a man praise himself, and one thing that pleased all men and that was to hear one man praise another. If you want to feel the most exquisite pleasure of journalism, arm yourself and club a contemporary.—Selma Times.

CURRENT NOTES.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE.

Little Orphan Annie's come to our house to stay.
An' wash the cups an' saucers up, an' brush the crumbs away.
An' show the chickens off the porch, an' dust the hearth an' sweep.
An' make the fire an' bake the bread, an' 'orn her board an' keep.
An' all us other children, when the supper things is done,
We set an' read the kitchen fire an' has the mostest fun.
An' listening to the witch tales 'at Annie tells about.
An' the gobbles uns 'at gits you
Ed you Don't Watch Out!

One't there was a little boy wouldn't say his prayers.
An' when he went to bed at night, away up stairs.
His mammy heard him holler, and his daddy heard him bawl.
An' when they turnt the kivers down, he wasn't here at all!
An' they seeked him in the rafter-room an' cubby-hole an' peeped
An' looked him up the chimney due an' everywhere, I guess,< but all they ever found was his pants an' round about.
An' the gobbles uns 'at gits you
Ed you Don't Watch Out!

An' one time a little girl 'ud allus laugh and grin.
An' make fun of ever' one, and all her blood-an'-kin.
An' one't when they was "company," an' old folks was there,
She mocked 'em and shocked 'em an' said she'd hit 'em.
An' 'thist was the bickest her heels and turnt to run and hide.
They was two great big black things a-standin' by her side.
An' they snatched her through the ceiling 'fore she know'd what she's about!
An' the gobbles uns 'at gits you
Ed you Don't Watch Out!

An' Little Orphan Annie says when the breeze is blue.
An' the lampwick sputters an' the wind goes woo-woo.
An' you hear the crickets quit, an' the moon is gray.
An' the lightnin' bugs in dew is all squenched away.
You better mind yer parents an' yer teachers foun' in dew.
An' cherish them 'at loves you, an' dry the orphan's tear.
An' help the poor and needy ones 'at clusters all about.
Er the gobbles uns 'at gits you
Ed you Don't Watch Out!

Illinois Democrats on the Tariff and the Surplus in the Treasury.

The Democratic convention of Illinois, incorporated the following sound planks in their platform.

That the surplus in the national treasury should be applied in payment of the national public debt to the end that large accumulation in the treasury beyond the necessities of the public service shall not occur, thus assuring an honest and economical government and relieving the people from unnecessary and oppressive taxation.

That the taxation of the people for other purposes than raising revenue for expenses of government, economically administered, is robbery under the form of law.

That we are in favor of a reduction to a revenue basis, and heartily endorse the action of those democratic representatives in congress who were faithful to the cause of tariff reform.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

AN OLD TOPIC.

An ancient homily, under the head "Stop my Paper," is again on the rounds, and is good enough to bear repetition. "After you get on your ear and make up your mind to 'stop' your paper to make the editor feel humiliated, just poke your finger in water and then pull it out and look for the hole. Then you will know how sadly you are missed. The man who thinks a paper cannot survive without his support ought to go off and stay a while. When he comes back he will find that half his friends didn't know he was gone. The other half didn't care a cent, and the world at large hadn't kept any account of his movements whatever. You will find things you cannot endorse in every paper. Even the Bible is plain and hits some hard licks. If you were to burn your Bible, hundreds of presses would go on still printing them, and if you were to stop your paper and call the editor all sorts of ugly names the paper would still be published. And, what is more, you will sneak around and borrow a copy of it every issue from your neighbor."

The charge of "borrowing" is not by any means always tenable. It frequently happens in our experience that a citizen, full of wrath at something in the Times, calls at the office, "pays up to date," and as he turns away says: "I don't want the paper any more!" The next morning this man of wrath buys a copy of the first boy who sings out "Here's your Times" in his vicinity, tucks it under his coat, retires to the quietest recess of his counting room or office, and there reads the sheet he but yesterday "cut off" and doomed as it were. That man had his whack at the manager and staff. He hit those who had, as he imagined he thought, wantonly and cruelly offended him; he had "stopped the paper" from reaching him through the accustomed channel, only to find he couldn't do without "the plaguey thing," even if it cost him five cents to buy and but three cents delivered at his door!

Scores of times we have seen this funny role enacted, and been vastly amused at the curious phase of human nature it brought out. The average reader knows as well as we, that "the paper," that is, the impersonal force composed of editorial staff, manager and publisher, is not responsible for hurting his feelings. He knows that "the paper" says things from a sense of duty and not to wound, annoy or injure any member of its constituency. But he has been hurt and must find somebody to hit back at, and the most sensitive one involved is the one whose living is derived from the publication; hence "I'll stop my paper," he says to himself "and thus stop that much of this fellow's income; for wounding me thus, he shall suffer."

The mere cutting off of subscription through passionate resentment, never injures a really able and useful newspaper. It may loose fearfully through the falling away from its support of a political party moved by frenzy and not by reason, and still the editor would gain in the long run. When Horace Greely opened his tremendous fire on the Know-nothings in 1854, the Tribune lost 18,000 daily circulation in a total of 40,000 in four weeks, and the weekly, then the most widely sold political paper in the country suffered to the extent of more than 50,000. Did Greely scare, or turn back, or even hesitate in his course? Not he. The war on political prostration became hotter and hotter. Friends of justice and toleration rallied to the help of the brave editor; friends who had been led away from him in a panic of temper returned, shamefaced, and the last estate of the episode saw the Tribune stronger, more influential and richer in resources than ever.

Men, especially American men, pay tribute first to courage and honesty, next to success.—Chattanooga Times.

The Hayneville Examiner says the men who worked their crops most this year have most of the corn and cotton that is made. This rule has very few exceptions. There are some of the most wretched crops in this county that ever were called crops, and there are some that are exceptionally good. Corn will average a better yield than last year, when there was but half a crop made. We are not prepared to say whether the cotton will average better or worse than last year, when there was, perhaps, 65 per cent, of a crop of it made.

A white man found recently in an old outhouse on the edge of the river swamp near Carthage. He was either a natural idiot or deranged, and stated that he had been knocked down, chloroformed, robbed and stripped by two negroes on the railroad near by, about midnight, and had lain him by the side of the rail road in an unconscious condition until daylight, when he had crept into the place where he was discovered; also, that his home was in Mississippi, and been working in Birmingham. As there was no evidence of a struggle having taken place at the point where he claimed to have been assaulted, and as a man answering to his description had been seen at Hull Station the evening before in a ragged and dirty condition, making his way through the swamp, the inference is that the assault is a fabrication, and that he was an escaped patient from the Insane Hospital, or had eluded his friends. Nothing intelligible could be obtained from him. He was a young man, fair, blue, eyes, light hair. He was furnished clothing, kept over night, when he left next morning to go, as he said, to Mississippi.

THE EARTHQUAKE.

Experience of an Eye Witness in Charleston, S. C.

"Necessarily the only description that can be given of the disaster which has befallen our city, consists in a narration of the experience and observation of individuals, and the subject being the same and the experience of all being nearly alike, the story told by one careful observer may well stand for one hundred others, with a slight variation. Probably the best idea that can be had of the disturbances, therefore, may be obtained from a narration of events and scenes of Tuesday night, as they were presented to a single person while engaged in his usual duties in the second story room of the News and Courier office. At the time of the first shock the writer's attention was vaguely attracted by a sound which seemed to come from the office below, and which was supposed for the moment to be caused by a rapid rolling of a heavy body as an iron safe or a heavily laden truck over the floor. Accompanying the sound there was a perceptible tremor of the building, not more marked, however, than the passage of a street car or drag along the streets for perhaps two or three seconds. The occurrence excited no surprise or comment then. By swift degrees, or perhaps all at once, it is difficult to say which, the sound deepened in volume, the ear caught the rattle of window sashes, gas fixtures, and other loose objects. Men in the office with perhaps a simultaneous flash of recollection of the Friday before glanced hurriedly at each other and sprang to their feet with the startled questions and answers, what is that? Earthquake! and all was bewilderment and confusion. The long roll deepened and spread into an awful roar that seemed to pervade at once the troubled earth and the still air above and around. The tremor was now a rude, rapid quiver that agitated the whole lofty, strong walled building as though it were being shaken by the hand of an immeasurable power with intent to tear its joints asunder and scatter its stones and bricks abroad as the tree casts its ripened fruit before the breath of the gale. There was no intermission in the vibration of the mighty subterranean engine. From first to last it was a continuous jar, only adding force at every moment, and as it approached and reached the climax of its manifestation it seemed for a few terrible seconds that no work of human hands could survive. Floors were heaving under foot, surrounding walls and partitions visibly swayed and two or three of falling masses of stone and brick and mortar was over head and without the terrible roar filled the ears and seemed to fill the mind and heart, dazing perception, bewildering thought, and for a few panting breaths, or while you held your breath in dreadful anticipation of an immediate and cruel death, you felt life was already passed and waited for the end as a victim with his head on the block awaits the fall of the uplifted axe. It is not given to any men to look in the face of the destroyer and yet live, but it is little to say that the group of strong men who shared the experience above faintly described will carry with them a recollection of that supreme moment to their dying day. None expected to escape. A sudden rush was simultaneously made to endeavor to attain the open air and flee to a place of safety, but before the door was reached all recoiled together to the tottering wall and stopped, feeling hope was in vain, that it was only a question of death in the building or without to be buried by a sinking roof or crushed by toppling walls. The uproar slowly died away in the seeming distance. The earth was still and oh that blessed stillness, but how rudely that stillness was broken. As we dashed down the stairway onto the streets, already on every side arose shrieks, cries of pain, and fear, a praying and wailing of terrified women and children commingled with the hoarse shouts of excitement out in the street. The air was filled with a whitish cloud of dry stifling dust from lime and mortar and shattered masonry, which falling upon the pavement and the stone roadway had been reduced to a powder. Through the cloud of dense fog gas lights flickered shedding but little light, so that you stumbled at every step over piles of brick or became entangled in lines of telegraph wires that depended in every direction from their broken supports. On every side were the hurrying forms of men and women bareheaded, partially dressed, some almost nude and many of whom were crazed with fear and excitement. Here a woman is supported, half fainting, in the arms of her husband, who vainly tries to soothe her while he carries her into the open space at the street corner, where present safety seems assured. There a woman lies on the pavement, with upturned face and outstretched limbs, and the crowd passes her by for the time not pausing to see whether she be alive or dead. A sudden light flares through a window overlooking the street. It becomes momentarily brighter and the cry of fire resounds from the multitude. A rush is made toward the spot. A man is seen doubled up and helpless against the wall, but at this moment, somewhere out at sea, overhead, deep in the ground, is heard again the low, ominous roll, which is too well known to be mistaken. It grows louder and nearer, like the growls of a wild beast swiftly approaching his prey and all is forgotten again in the frenzied rush for the opened space, where alone there is hope for security, faint, though it be. The tall buildings on either hand blot out the skies and the stars, and seem to overhang every foot of ground between them. The shattered cornices and copings, and the tops of the walls seem piled from both sides to the center of the street. It seems that a touch would send the shattered masses left standing upon the people below, who looked up to them and shrink together as the tremor of the earthquake again passes under them, and the earthquake again passes under them, and the mysterious reverberation swell and roll along like some infernal drum-beat summoning them to die, and it passed away, and again is experienced the blessed feeling of deliverance from impending calamity, which it may well be believed evokes a mute but earnest offering of mingled prayer and thanksgiving from every heart in the throng. Again far along the streets and up from all eyes that lead into it from either side, is heard that chorus of wailing and lamentation which though it had not ceased, was scarcely noticed a moment before. It is a dreadful sound, the sound of helpless horror-stricken humanity, old and young, strong and feeble alike, where all are so feeble calling for help from their fellow creatures and raising their anguished voices in petition to heaven for mercy where no human aid could avail. It is not a scene to be described by any mortal tongue or pen. It is not a scene to be forgotten when it has been witnessed, and when the witness has shared all its danger and felt all its agony.

The first shock occurred at seven minutes of ten as was indicated this morning by the public clock hands, all of which had stopped at that fateful hour as though to mark the end of time for so many who had heard the preceding hour pealed forth by St. Michael's chimes, without a thought but of a long and happy life. The second shock, which was but a faint and crisp re-echo of the first, was felt eight minutes later. As it passed away the writer started homeward to find scenes enacted on Broad street around the News and Courier office repeated at every step of the way. St. Michael's steeple towered high and white above the gloom seemingly uninjured. The station house a massive brick building across the street had apparently lost its roof which had fallen around it. A little further on, the roof of the portico of Hibernian hall.

A handsome building in Grecian style had crashed to the ground, carrying down part of the massive granite pillars with it. All the way up Meeting street, which in respect of its general direction and importance may be called the Broadway of Charleston, the road was piled with debris from the tops of walls. In passing the Charleston hotel, which is to carry out the comparison above indicated, occupies the position of Stewart's up-town store in New York, a third shock was felt, about ten minutes after the second, and of course caused the greatest alarm in that neighborhood as elsewhere. At Marion Square, corresponding exactly with Union Square, New York, a great crowd had collected, as even the edges of the widespread territory embraced could not be reached by the nearest buildings in event of their fall. From this crowd, composed of men, women and children of both races, arose incessant calls and cries and lamentations, while over the motley, half-dressed throng was shed the light of the conflagration, which had broken out just beyond the square immediately after the first shock and had now wholly enveloped several buildings in flames. In three-quarters of the town at the same time similar large fires were observed under full headway, and the awful significance of the earthquake may be most fully appreciated, perhaps, when it is said that with those tremendous fires blazing up all at once round them and threatening the city with total destruction, the people whom you met on the streets or saw gathered together in groups in open places evidently did not give them a thought. No one watched the ruddy flames or the pillars of cloud rising high into the still night air. All were too intent on listening with strained senses for a recurrence of that horrible growl or groan of the power under land to give thought to new terrors, though it had thronged his own home and many homes to the doomed city. Crowds poured in from every direction to the square just described, as though it had been indeed a charmed circle, and life depended on passing within its grassy bounds. Street cars, carriages and other vehicles were ranged in lines on the streets surrounding the square, while horses stood stock still with turned heads as though stiff in the ground. In anxious inquiry colored people everywhere were heard increasing in their exclamations of alarm, in singing of hymns and in fervent appeals for God's mercy, in which appeals God knows many a proud heart who heard them arising in the night, and in the hour of his wondrous might, devoutly, and humbly, and sincerely joined. Danger brings all of us to the level of the lowest. There was no distinction of place or power, pride or caste, in the assemblages that were gathered together in Charleston on Tuesday night. It was a curious spectacle to look back upon. It is a good one to remember, for white and black alike. There were instances of unselfish devotion, of kind and loving regard between master and servant, mistress and maid, in the presence of common ill and of threatened ruin, that showed, as nothing else could show, how strong the tie is that binds our white people and our black people together, and this lesson of the dread visitor we may hope, too, will never be forgotten. Arrived at his home, the writer found some scenes of destruction and wreck which marked nearly every other home in the city. All the houses in the neighborhood had suffered seriously, and streets, yards and gardens were filled with falling chimneys and fragments of walls, while the walls that were left standing were rent asunder in many places from top to bottom, and were badly shattered in every instance. Women and children, roused from sleep or interrupted in their evening pursuits by the sound of the ruin being effected above and around them, rushed out into the streets and huddled together awaiting the end, whatever it might be. Invalids were brought out on mattresses and deposited in the roadway. No thought was given to treasure left behind in the effort to save the peculiar treasure of life itself. Until long after midnight the streets were filled with fugitives in the sight of their homes. Through the long hours that followed, few were the eyes, even of the children, that were closed in sleep. Charleston was full of those who watched for the morning, and never in any city, in any land, did the first grey shades that marked the approach of dawn appear so beautiful and so welcome to the eyes as they appeared to the thousands of people who hailed them this morning from the midst of countless wrecked home in our thrice scourged, but still patient, still brave, still hopeful, still beautiful city by the sea.

REMARKABLE UPHEAVAL.

Condition of Country on Road from Savannah to Charleston.

Savannah News, Sept. 2.

Conductor W. T. Blanchard left Savannah in charge of train 43 on the Charleston and Savannah railway at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. His experience is perhaps the most interesting that has yet been told. The train was due in Charleston at 12:25. The road was smooth and the run to Adams Run, 30 miles this side of Charleston, was made on schedule time. At Adams Run there was a delay of some minutes for orders. Between Adams Run and this point there is a most curious and wonderful result of the upheaval. The track for several miles is swayed out of place from three to five feet. It was moved in every instance to the east and toward the ocean. The road runs through a level country, and there is little or no grade, so that the track was simply shoved out of place, at some points clear off from the road-bed.

A REMARKABLE UPHEAVAL.

Along the road, the entire distance from Adams Run to Ravenel's, the ground is full of deep holes, some of them fifteen and twenty feet deep and from ten to thirty feet across. The soil in that part of the country is black, but around the openings of these curious holes, or what at first looked like sinks, are masses of a blue substance, somewhat resembling volcanic matter. Instead of being tremendous upheaval. The blue matter, which is something like mud, has the appearance of having been blown out of the ground into the air and then fallen back in heaps. The country is what is called a dry swamp and is ten miles from salt water, and twenty-five or more miles from the ocean. The holes are filled with water, with a brackish taste, and a smell something like swamp water. When the train reached Adams Run it slowed down and ran on to Ravenel's, reaching there an hour late. The track was uneven and in some places almost off the road bed.

EVIDENCES OF GREAT COMOTION.

The ground was pitted with deep holes and everywhere there were evidences of great comotion in the earth. The water in the holes bubbled up in the centre like a boiling pot and was in a continual state of agitation. A strong sulphurous smell was noticeable and the blue matter that was blown out of the holes covered the ground for some distance. At New Road, between Adams Run and Ravenel's, the phenomena is more remarkable than anywhere else. The country is sparsely settled and there are few houses along the line of road. The people are excited and think the strange phenomena is a visitation upon them.

EXCITEMENT AMONG THE NEGROES.

The negroes in the phosphate mines this side of the Ashley have quit work and refuse to go back. Hundreds of them have gone from the mines to their homes in the country.

The fast mail train which left Savannah on Tuesday night for the north is sidetracked at Ravenel's waiting to get through. Road-master Craig is there with a force of hands, having traveled from Charleston on a push car yesterday morning, and expects to have the road open to Charleston today. The fast mail's passengers are provided for in sleeping cars. Mr. Blanchard turned over his passengers to the fast mail, and at 3 o'clock started back to Savannah, returning at 8:15 last night.

The Earthquake Outlook.

We have now spread before our readers a complete history of the worst North American earthquake ever recorded in history. We have given a summary of the world's earthquakes down to the present time. The scientists of the age have spoken through our columns, giving their theories, and in some cases their predictions.

People everywhere are now asking the question, What is the outlook? No man can tell. According to the records, of the fifty-nine earthquakes shocks in the United States and Canada last year, Canada had eight, New England five, the other Atlantic states nine, the Pacific slope thirty-four, and the Mississippi valley only three. Of 364 earthquakes in this country in the twelve years ending with 1882, the Atlantic coast had 147, the Pacific slope 151, and the Mississippi valley sixty-six.

From these figures it will be seen that the seaboard states are more liable to this danger than the interior states. There are different opinions as to the advantages and disadvantages of certain physical conformation. For instance, on the very day when Atlanta was congratulating herself upon the thickness and solidity of her granite base, New Orleans was rejoiced because she is situated differently. As the Memphis expresses it:

New Orleans, standing in a marsh, on a sort of cushion of mud and water, is not liable to the shocks felt by cities on solid stratifications of the earth's crust, but it might be buried in the depths by an extraordinary convulsion.

Letting these conflicting opinions go for what they are worth, it is well to bear in mind the fact that each century has two earthquake periods, one near the middle and other near the end. We are now approaching the end of the century, and if earthquakes increase in number and violence we need not be much surprised.—Atlanta Constitution.

An Enterprising, Reliable House.

W. M. Nisbet can always be relied upon, not only to carry in stock the best of everything, but to secure the Agency for such articles as have well known merit, and are popular with the people, thereby sustaining the reputation of being always enterprising, and ever reliable. Having secured the Agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will sell it on a positive guarantee. It will surely cure any and every affection of Throat, Lungs, and Chest, and to show our confidence, we invite you to call and get a Trial Bottle Free. Not Mexican Minister Jackson has resigned sure enough this time. We feel safe in venturing, as much as the president has appointed his successor.—Montgomery Dispatch.

AFTERMATH OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

The experience recounted above did not contain all of the horrors of the earthquake. The shock continued through several nights. The Atlanta Constitution sent out Mr. Henry Grady to explore the cracked country.

The party took a team from Augusta to a point on the Railroad leading to Charleston. Mr. Grady thus recounts his experience to Charleston en route. The narrative is necessarily much abridged. To quote the account:

A MORNING SCENE IN AUGUSTA.

As the train pulled into Augusta in the cool gray of the morning, a remarkable scene was disclosed. The center of Broad street was filled with boxes, on which people had slept all night. On Greene street there were hasty beds under the trees, from which early risers were then getting up. I recognized the members of several families I knew sleeping on the piazzas. The sidewalk at the Planters' hotel was filled with chairs, in which men, women and children were asleep. Covered with shawls and bed clothing, they made a curious sight. I saw Mayor May and his family at barely daybreak, walking the streets, and Captain Lettuce, of the Central road, whom we sought, had not been in his house at all. We met him and his family in the streets. A little later we saw breakfasts being served in piazzas. A touching melancholy pervaded, and the faces of women and children, pale from exhaustion and anxiety, were pitiful to look upon. A sad sight it was to see babies in their improvised beds asleep on the streets. The tender care of mothers had been exhausted in the endeavor to care for their little ones. The children were to be seen in twos, threes, and larger numbers, sleeping after the experiences of one of the most terrible nights ever known. The house of Hon. Clay Foster, which is frame, was filled last night with fifty persons who refused to stay in their houses of brick. They slept on the floors, on the piazzas, and on the back steps.

A remarkable feature of the scene is that the respectable houses are entirely deserted, and the inmates were on the streets praying for mercy and forgiveness.

There are negro prayer meetings going on night and day, and the religious enthusiasm of these people almost amount to frenzy. Charleston, S. C., September 2. [Special Telegram by H. W. G.]—Out in the country from Augusta the signs of the earthquake had not abated. Even the negro cabins had lost their occupants, and picnics on mattresses spread under the big trees were abundant. The first signs of the convulsion that were writ on the earth were found at Langley mills. There a remarkable scene was unfolded. Langley pond was a bare waste. Several hundred acres of pond area being bare, the pools being filled with operatives and country people catching fish. On the near shore a hotel of pine brushes extemporized, and heaps of pan fish, corn dodgers and vinegar sauce made a menu that filled all out of doors with an appetizing order.

THE EARTH WRENCHED ASUNDER.

The Langley pond, the pride of this section, was gone, and the forest for half a mile below looked as if a cyclone had torn through them. This dam cost $50,000. It was about 400 feet across, and two carriages could have driven abreast easily over its top. The sides were properly sloped and sodden. The earthquake had wrenched this enormous structure right and left. Great cracks, converging nowhere, but apparently made in caprice, disfigured the approaches. It was through such cracks as these that the water made its way and swept the dam out of existence. These fissures were not made by the earth sinking, but by its being wrenched violently apart.

Both sides of the fissures were usually level. Into one of these giant cracks a pole was lowered without reaching the bottom. A hundred feet away from the pond the solid earth was wrenched into fissures that had no perceptible drift of shape or direction. There had been no eruption and no extraneous under sand was found in the cracks. It was simply as if some tremendous power had torn the earth apart, cutting the cracks clean and definite. The largest crack, was, perhaps, two feet across and bottomless as far as appearances could reach.

SEPTEMBER 11 1886.

RE-UNION OF THE TENTH ALA.

According to published programme the surviving members of the old Tenth Alabama Regiment met at Riverside, in St. Clair county, Sept. 4th. Upon call of the roll sixty-four of the regiment were found to be present, as follows:

FIELD OFFICERS.

Gen Wm H. Forney, Col John H. Caldwell, Col W. T. Smith, Maj James D. Truss, Adjutant I. W. Grant.

COMPANY OFFICERS AND MEN.

Co. A.—Sergeant M. M. Fulgum, N. A. Hood, James Lee, D. A. Treese, W. H. Dean, D. C. Kendrick, R. D. Crump, P. R. Crump, Ed. Lee, Greg. I., Thos Turner.

Co. F.—M. J. Mobley, R. W. Respes, J. R. Coleman, J. H. Mobley, W. H. Robinson, J. B. Martin, R. D. Williamson, Wm. Braden, H. F. Barber, G. M. Dixon, E. J. Roberts, E. J. Roberts Jr., Jesse Nivens, E. R. Buchanan, W. T. Hilton, S. G. Murchison.

Co. D.—B. G. McClellan, W. R. Sanders, J. M. Martin, Wm F. Kennedy, A. J. Nunnally, Jo. Hill, D. J. Clark, J. Y. Henderson.

Co. I.—J. W. Gilleland.

Co. H.—Capt John Floyd Smith.

Co. E.—Lieut J. W. Heacock, J. K. Elliott, R. E. Cock, T. P. Montgomery, C. A. Orr, Thos L. Henderson, Jas Hendricks, R. J. Cunningham.

Co. K.—W. H. Malone, J. M. Giddings, W. H. Cordell, J. B. McClung.

Co. G.—Capt J. E. Farmer, W. P. Thompson, S. A. McCollum, S. K. Hodges, I. L. Swan, Jno D Walker, John Crawford, drummer of the Regiment.

Co. B.—J. S. McLaughlin, J. T. Reed, F. M. Wool.

Upon the formation of the Regiment other Confederate soldiers were requested to form on the left of the Regiment and participate in the festivities of the day, whereupon Col. Elliott and Col. Webb formed a portion of their old commands upon the line, a list of which were not furnished the secretary, and which, consequently, it is to be regretted cannot be given in this report. A brief intermission was then had, when dinner was announced, a bountiful supply of which was spread for all the old soldiers and invited friends present.

After dinner a permanent organization of the Regiment was formed and Col. W. T. Smith was elected President and L. W. Grant was elected Secretary. A committee was also formed of one from each company to take steps looking to another re-union of the Regiment in the year 1887. This committee is composed as follows: M. M. Fulgum, Asheville; J. R. Coleman, Riverside; B. G. McClellan, Alexandria; J. W. Gilleland, Atlanta; Dr. Rippe Davis, Montevilla; John Floyd Smith, Oxford; J. W. Heacock, Alpine; D. B. Oden, Childersburg; J. B. Farmer, Jacksonville; J. S. McLaughlin, Birmingham.

The Committee met and decided upon Springville, St. Clair county, as the place for next re-union and the first Friday in Sept. 1887 as the time.

Immediately following dinner and before the organization, short speeches were made by Messrs. Forney, Caldwell, Smith, Truss, Grant, Heacock and Elliott in the order named. The speech of Gen. Forney showed that from first to last seventeen hundred men had been enrolled in the regiment. Of these two hundred were killed and forty percent, wounded, while four hundred died of disease.

The history of the Regiment was further recounted by other speakers, all highly honorable to the Regiment.

It is to be hoped that there will be a full attendance of the survivors at Springville a year hence. The day was very pleasantly spent by all who attended and not a member regretted having gone. Old comrades met who had not seen each other for twenty years and the scene was at once impressive and affecting.

Death of Hon. F. W. Bowdon.

Dispatches Thursday brought the mournful intelligence of the death of Hon. F. W. Bowdon, one of the most prominent young men in the State, at his home in Talladega, after an illness of some weeks. The immediate cause of his death was from blood poisoning, it is said, following a surgical operation. His untimely death will be mourned throughout the State. He was State Senator elect from Talladega and Clay counties.

dangerous, though the yawning fissures does that abundantly. The engineer notifies us, as he pulls out backwards, that we are taking our own risk. The villages through which we run remind us of Sunday. The stores are closed, business is suspended and crowds literally swarm about the engine inquiring for news. They have had no papers, few telegrams, no trains and the most curious rumors are afloat. By this time our special engine is crowded with Charlestonians who have begged passage under the most urgent reasons. The wood tender is covered with them. Several are propped on the cowcatcher, a very good seat on an engine that is flying backward. Among our passengers is Mr. Tabers, the son of the famous editor who was killed in a duel by McGaw.

THE EARTHQUAKE CENTRE.

Mr. Tabers lives at Summerville, the ill-fated village, twenty-six miles from Charleston, which is undoubtedly the earthquake center. He was in the shock of Friday night, and says it was very much severer than the disturbance at Charleston. It has been so every time. Mr. Tabers' theory as to the cause of the disturbance at Summerville is that in the phosphate beds underlying the town, the phosphate rocks are very porous and light and loosely knit.

At Branchville a curious sight presented itself. The depot grounds were crowded with negro men, women and children who had walked from Summerville, and had camped out all night. It was a motley crew. They had left their houses during the shock, and had never returned. They were holding the liveliest sort of prayer meeting, and eating such scraps as they could beg or buy. The railroad track was sprinkled with them still coming. Old men scarcely able to totter and little children in arms. A white hearse almost as great a look place yesterday. Three passenger coaches and two cars were packed to suffocation, and hundreds were left on the track. They left their houses open and did not care where they were going. It was simply a pell-mell flight.

THE DESERTED VILLAGE.

Summerville is certainly a deserted village. We continued to meet negroes hurrying along with more uneasy haste than they ever did before their masters' hounds. We are now approaching the fated village. The streets are empty except at just the point the engine stops. The remarkable phase of Summerville's convulsion are the flowing fissures and holes and the twisted railroad tracks. The flowing holes are simply round or oblong holes, from which streams of sand and water run unceasingly. The sand is not at all clayey. It is whitish powdered rock, and appears to have been freshly ground. Occasionally it chokes the flow of water, when the water pulls forth, clearing the obstruction away. The water itself is brackish, tepid and has a distinct taste of sulphur. Where it runs and sinks into the ground it leaves a stain that is more like iron. The waterflows from many of the long fissures with which the streets are sealed, but others are dry. The holes and fissures follow the shock, appearing at random. They did not, however, flow freely until the shock had passed.

ANOTHER RAILROAD WRECK.

The tracks of railroad here were twisted in the shape of an "S." The iron bars were bent as if they had been heated. They were usually unattached from the ties, but the whole track was zigzagged. Occasionally the bars had an upturn. The ends were lifted high in the air. The whole was done apparently instantly. The night passenger running to the misplaced track was wrecked, both the engineer and fireman being killed.

A SOUND LIKE THUNDER.

A Mr. Lawton says of the shock at Summerville: "When I woke up, I was covered with plaster, and the house was straining and creaking. After the shock there was a roaring for a full half hour. It was exactly as if a continuous roll of thunder was under the surface of the earth. It was as loud as ordinary thunder and without inflection. This roaring was not heard in Charleston. The shock threw lamps out of their hangings, broke almost every piece of crockery in the city, and destroyed every chimney. Many houses were leveled and, nearly every house disabled."

RENEWED SHOCKS REPORTED.

The villagers from sixty miles out from Charleston report renewed shocks to-day, the heaviest of which appears to have been about two and four o'clock. We find the people living out of doors for this entire distance. Usually the family is grouped under a tree, and often make a very interesting picture. They all rise and gaze at the flying engine, as if it was a new earthquake, and return the salutes of the passengers with unguessed melancholy. At Ridgeville there was not a chimney left standing. The entire population was living out-doors and in box cars. Flowing fissures were reported and repeated shocks had been felt during the day.

TWO PERSONS KILLED.

Two persons were killed in the neighborhood by falling houses. Cautions are issued to the conductor to run very slow, and gangs of track hands are busy straightening the twisted track that we may pass over it.

Looking down a long stretch of track, the rails were frequently out of line several feet. A very intelligent trackman said:

"The earth has contracted. I have been going over the road all day cutting out pieces of bar. I have cut out as much as five feet in one place. I have cut out two feet here. The earth contracts, and that bends the rails, so we have to shorten them."

He further told of a stream of water that came rushing from the midst of a gang of workmen and rose several feet in the air.

A PITIFUL SCENE.

At Jeldburg we saw a pitiful scene. Hundreds of negroes and whites were gathered in the depot or on the platform singing and praying. They took no notice of our arrival, but their weird, strong singing went on. Such terror I never saw on so many faces. The women were crying. The children's features were tense with fear. Some had fainted and others were prostrated. It was rapidly growing dark, and as night gathered the terror seemed to grow. At the word of prayer every soul went down in abasement. The prayers were intoned so that they were almost songs, and, interrupted by shouts and screams, were pathetic and exciting beyond description. The prayers were directed squarely against the earthquake. Whites and blacks joined in. Even the travelers lifted their hats and bowed their heads. It was a scene never to be forgotten. Those wretched and pitiful people, turned out of their homes, huddled under quilts or on the bare ground, in paroxysms of fear, ignorant superstitions and weeping. The women and children would ask us questions with tears streaming down their cheeks, and beg us to take them with us, although we were going into the seat of danger. It was nearly dark when we left. The little ones were crowding under the quilts stretched on poles. There were no signs of food or supper getting. The praying and shouting had increased. When we left, the singing, the shouting and wails of the children followed us down the track.

At this place your correspondent drank his first earthquake water. It came from a fissure which had thrown up a car load of bluish mud, very sticky and cohesive. The water tasted of sulphur and iron, but not disagreeably so. At this place we saw the first house that had been leveled by the shock. It was a country double house, and had killed a woman and child when it fell. It was tumbled in a heap, just as a heap of chips shaken flat.

DRINKING EARTHQUAKE WATER.

CREEPING ALONG THROUGH THE WOODS.

It is now dark! The engine that should have had us in Charleston at 2 o'clock, is picking its way slowly along. Camp fires blaze in the woods, and their inhabitants flitting about the fires. People in the woods remained one of war times. Our engine has just been thrown sharply to the right and then to the left, and a telegraph line-man, who was sitting on the tender thrown to the ground severely injured. On stopping we learn that a sharp shock had passed. The track is three feet out of gear to the right, and left in an "S" shape. A trackman reports a shock a half an hour ago, accompanied with an explosion which opened the ground for a space of six feet, and threw a stream of water fifteen feet high. The engine is crawling along, and the outbound passenger train has just passed us at a snail's pace. We can feel constant inequalities in the track, raising and sinking and sawing. As we pass by the fissures of flowing water which almost line the track we detect them by the smell of sulphur even before we see the water glistening. Truly, we are in the midst of earthquakes. A feeling of depression and awe has seized upon the party of travelers that began the trip so gaily, and will not be thrown off. Of ten for a hundred feet the engine reels as if it were a boat; and

SO WE GO INTO CHARLESTON.

The first sight that struck us on entering was a long line of cars, crowded to suffocation with people who were in for the night. The first sound was religious singing proceeding from each of the cars. The first impression made on us by Charleston was that it was a disorderly city, the sidewalks and streets being piled with brick and debris. The second impression was that it was a slightly tipsy city, a house here and there being out of plumb, and leaning affectionately against its neighbor, or propped on a stick. The third impression was that it was a camp. Citadel Green and every park or breathing place was covered with tents, under which could be seen people packed like sardines.

SCENES IN THE CITY.

The streets were full of people hurrying to and fro with baggage and bedclothing, always walking in the middle of the street. At every hand we met mothers carrying babies, fathers carrying bed-clothing, and children carrying themselves and seeking the tents, the parts of the walls. A sinister effect was produced by the fact that there was not a light in the second story of any building. On the first floor it was usually dark. Above the first floor invariably so.

A MORTAL BLOW TO THE CITY.

The first impression, after a two hours ride, was that a mortal blow had been struck the brave old city, and that she was staggering on toward a very desperate future. The pile of debris in front of the brick buildings was unbroken, indicating that none had escaped. Many immense buildings had crumbled and fallen, such as the store of William Bird, which is a total wreck. I have talked with many people, and have caught the discussion in crowds. Abandoned, the Pavilion hotel is empty. Mr. Benner, the veteran superintendent of the Western Union, who has for forty years been in such seems, said to me:

"The Lord did Charleston fifty times more harm in fifteen seconds than the war did in five years. I walked through the city by the light of the fire of '61, and the damage is twenty times greater now than then. I have spent the day examining, and I have seen but one brickhouse, George Williams' new house, that is not injured. The city is so unsettled and cracked that it will be necessary to tear the houses down and rebuild them. You can find no words to fully describe the situation."

Only One of a Thousand.

About twenty-three years ago an itching sore appeared on my left leg, which eventually covered almost the entire surface from the knee to the ankle. The discharge of bloody water was continual, and I suffered the most intense pain for many years. I could scarcely sleep at night, and a greater portion of the time I could not walk except on crutches. In turn I used about the salves, ointments, sarsaparillas and blood purifiers that I could hear of, and was treated by a number of physicians without obtaining relief. A passing commercial traveler advised me to try Swift's Specific. I finally did so. I have only used a half a dozen bottles, and my leg is sound again and there is scarcely any sign of the terrible and long protracted affliction left. I can walk as well as ever without the use of a cane even and occasionally spend a day plowing. My neighbors all know of my affliction and will join me in bearing witness to the great cure wrought by S. S. S.

APPLICATION FOR DECREE TO SELL LAND.

STATE OF ALABAMA,
Calhoun County.)
In Probate Court, Special Term, Sept. 9th, 1886.

This day came J. T. Vinson, Administrator of the estate of Peter Aecker, deceased, and filed in Court his application in writing and under oath, praying for an order and decree to sell certain lands in said petition described, belonging to said estate, and situated in this county, for the purpose of division among the heirs at law and distributees of said estate, upon the ground that the same cannot be equitably and beneficially divided by metes and bounds. It is therefore ordered that the 18th day of October 1886, be and is hereby appointed a day upon which to hear and determine said application and that notice thereof be given by publication for three successive weeks in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper published in said county, as a notice to all persons concerned, to be and appear before me at my office in the Court House of said county, on said 18th day of September 1886, and contest said application if they think proper.

A. WOODS,
Judge of Probate.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be made in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alums or phosphate powders. Sold only in the ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall Street, N. Y.

THE LAST WALTZ.

"The boys concluded to get up a dancing school. I begged my parents to let me go in, and they yielded. There was a nice party of us, about thirty in number. The girls got up a class, too. Old Cady was the teacher. Everybody called him 'Old Cady.' He weighed about 200 hundred pounds, was short and round as a barrel, and as good natured as the days and nights was long. He did not do much dancing himself. He played the fiddle and instructed us. The boys met two evenings in the week for lessons. The girls met in the afternoon. After we had made some progress, our teacher concluded to give us a 'hop' once a week. To these hops all might go, and members of former classes were invited. As Old Cady had been teaching dancing school every winter for time out of mind, the invitation embraced pretty much all the town. The most of the fathers and mothers of the class had been his pupils, and so his hops formed a pretty group of old and young together.

"On the evening of the first hop he gave us the easy dances in the first part of the evening, and later on he suited the tastes of the old pupils. I remember that evening well. I was all excitement and bashfulness. I got along nicely, however, until a waltz was called. I knew I could waltz, though it was called the hardest of the dances. The music started. Old Cady was a genius. The cadences of his music seemed to lift one off his feet. The air that he played had floated through my life ever since those years. He summoned the gems of every opera and sonata and requiem of the masters, and picked up the melodies in which the people have sung and do sing in every land, and the air whistled on the streets, and dressed them up for his purposes, and made them the spirit and soul of the dance. He did not seem to know what he was about to play, and as the dance progressed, now and then a new thought seemed to inspire him as new strains whirled us on. Now he would lean forward, and a plaintive air would lead us; then, rising, with chin and elbow elevated, a stately measured movement, and, perhaps, as if laughing, a light and tripping step. It was Annie Laurie of the Marcellaise. He even dared the sacred strains of 'Joy! Joy! To the host that in glory advances!' I remember with what audacity old Coronation once ran out from under his bow, as if in defiance; and he played it with such grand effect that it did not seem out of place.

"I looked around the room for some one to waltz with. I espied Annie, a bright-eyed daughter of a neighbor. She was a few years younger than I. We had played together always, though of late she seemed a little shy. I invited her to waltz with me. She said: 'Why, I never tried to waltz, except with the girls. I am afraid I can't.' 'She stepped forward, and we started out. We made a few missteps. It was a little difficult for us to swing clear around at first. We got it soon, however. The exercise, and perhaps a little shyness, brought the color to Annie's cheeks. Her eyes brightened up, and I thought to myself, 'Annie is really beautiful.' The music stopped. Annie and I had danced our first waltz. From that time on she and I were always partners for the waltz. Old Cady was proud of us. He gave us more attention than the others. The waltz, as taught by Old Cady, was not a jumping, hopping, Apache waltz. There was none of the horrid, awkward reversing. It was smooth and graceful. Annie and I became expert. We used to do all kinds of fancy tricks. She would whirl like a top under a wreath, or turn with a glass of water on her head. We even succeeded in waltzing around the hall with a glass of water on the head of each of us. It was all play. As I look back, I think how happy we were then.

"I went off to college. My father gave me sage advice, and my mother enjoined me not to fall in love. 'You must get the cage before you catch the bird, my son. When I came back on my first vacation, Annie's folks had moved away. 'I worked my way through college, studied hard and stood well. I came west. I bought and sold town lots and homesteads, went to the legislature, was speaker of the house one session. I had been a candidate for congress, and ran ahead of my ticket; but my party was in the minority. I was on one side of nearly every important law suit in two or three counties near my home. Everybody said I was successful; I had made money, and was considered rich. When I started out I kept to my mother's advice, and after I was able to build the cage, I did not want the bird. I had got to be an old bachelor.

"One winter I was at the capital attending the supreme court. The legislature was in session. I was charged by a railroad company in my part of the state to see that it was not hurt by hostile legislation. It was my business to know everybody, and everybody knew me. Fan of all sorts and amusements of every kind kept up high carnival. One evening a banquet was given at the leading hotel, with dancing in the grand dining hall. Of course, I went. Everybody went. Some of my people were there. They had to be looked after, introduced to the notables and made happy. There were many things to be watched. Intrigues are often laid in a capital on such occasions. I had never danced there. No one had ever seen me dance. It was to me a forgotten art. The new-fangled dances were an abomination to me. They are to all of us old fogies. I was busy, however, from one to another, chatting and listening to everything. All at once, a most quently looking lady, magnificently dressed, came in, leaning on the arm of an elderly gentleman, and seated herself. A second look, and it was Annie, more beautiful than she was a quarter of a century ago. I stepped over to her; she met me most cordially. She introduced me to Mr. Gage, my husband's uncle. While we were talking, the band struck up a grand waltz.

"'Annie, let us try it.' 'All right,' said she. 'She rose, and I took her right hand, and she laid her left on my shoulder; her train swung out gracefully, and we began to spin around the hall, and the memories of a quarter century began to spin through my head. The old flush came to Annie's cheeks, and the old luster to her eyes. We waltzed as easily as ever. As we danced, we talked. She asked about this one and that one. We had a little word of each. I told her this reminded me of old times. She said: 'Yes,' I said: 'You dance as lightly, and look as beautiful as ever.' She blushed a little. I thought, and her big eyes looked up into my face. 'Do you think so?' So we went on dancing and talking, thinking of nothing else. It was a whirl, a fancy, a dream, an ecstasy. The music stopped. The spell was broken. Annie swung round to my side. Her left hand took my right arm naturally, and we stepped forward to cross the hall. We glanced around the room, and she exclaimed: 'Oh! was there no one else dancing?' Sure enough: that was so. The faces of my friends were smiling a delight and a surprise. One enthusiastic one of them clapped his hands, and all around the room ran a little cheer. Annie looked at me; her face flushed, and then she tossed up her chin and glanced around the room like a queen.

"'I must go now,' she said. 'We take an early train.' As we walked toward the grand stairs, I thanked her for the dance, and told her I had never danced the waltz since the old days. She said: 'Do you know, I have never waltzed with any one but you—strange, is it not?' She gave me her hand at the foot of the stairs. 'Good-bye,' and she turned, and walked grandly up. I stood there looking at her, and as she reached the landing, she turned her head and looked a smile down at me over her shoulder. As she turned away and faced the electric light, I thought—was I mistaken?—I saw a big tear-drop in her eye. My heart was thumping like a stamp mill. I strutted a little as I turned away, saying to myself: 'I could have won her. Then I thought what a fool I had been not to catch the bird when I could and take chances on the cage. I would willingly give up every dollar I have, and every success I have achieved, and start life again from the grass roots, at my age even, with Annie. The boys gathered around me; said it was magnificent. That everybody stopped dancing to watch us. 'Didn't know you could dance,' they said, 'then beat everybody.' They asked me lots of questions; but I got away as soon as I could. I didn't sleep much that night. I was thinking of Annie. I had not even learned her name, or where she lived. In the morning, which I thought would never come, I went to the register, and found that 'Mr. Gage and niece' had left. Annie had gone her way, and I went mine.

Gadsden, Sep. 7.—Gabe Watts, colored, has just been jailed for the commission of a horrible crime. He lived ten miles from town with his three small children, the oldest ten years of age. Recently he expressed a desire to get rid of his children, and one night last week, just before day, he knocked all of them in the head with a stick, connected them with the fire by old quilts, and left the house. The fire was soon discovered and the children saved. The oldest one is dead and the other two barely alive, as their skulls are seriously fractured. He confessed everything and says he killed them because he did not want white people to have them. He talks sanely, although he is believed to have been crazy.

A Postmaster's Statement

About 3 years ago there came upon me a feeling of general debility, accompanied with loss of appetite and energy. Eventually rheumatism attacked me in my shoulder and arms, which so disabled me that I could not dress myself. Finally I had to give up my school. I was then engaged in teaching. The physicians tried various prescriptions, but failed to bring me relief. In fact, some of them seemed to be at a loss to make a diagnosis of my case. The disease finally settled in my right hip and leg, and produced lumps under the skin and swelling of the limb, especially at the ankle, that I could not rest at night or walk except with a crutch. Previously I had been a man of fine physique and strong constitution. Various remedies were tried, but no permanent relief followed, and they were abandoned. Seeing a certificate of a case similar to mine that had been cured by Swift's Specific, I concluded to try it. I commenced to improve on the first bottle. Have taken twelve bottles of the large and small, and am glad to say that I have been entirely relieved, and had no symptom of the disease for more than twelve months. I recommend Swift's Specific to all my friends.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Foster.

Friday night when the family of Mr. G. W. Foster were through with supper they assembled in the sitting room. Mrs. Foster arose and went into an adjoining room for a book to read, returning almost immediately. On entering the door she stopped, seemed to gasp for breath, staggered into the arms of her affectionate husband, who had been attracted by her strange actions. He placed her gently on the bed and ran hastily for Dr. Huger. On his return she had breathed her last—she was dead.

This died one of the most estimable of women. She was a most affectionate wife and tender mother, highly esteemed by all who knew her. She was a shining light in Ammonite society circles and her death is greatly deplored. Her remains were carried to Tuscaloosa, last night, for interment, accompanied by her husband and children and several of our citizens. Our sympathies are with the bereaved ones.—Anniston Watchman.

A Great Year.

New York World.

Scientists are astonished at the remarkable phenomena of nature which have rendered this year in some respects unique. In one portion of British India six hundred inches of rain have fallen in the last twelve months, while an agricultural region in Texas of 150,000 square miles has had scarcely one-eighth of an inch in over a year.

Sudden and startling changes in barometric pressure and in temperature are reported both in Europe and America. An earthquake the like of which has not known since history first began its records here has brought destruction and despair to a portion of our people. And it was snowing the other day in Montana. Altogether A. D. 1886 will be remembered for other strange freaks than the appearance of the sea serpent.

Great Historical Earthquakes.

742.—Awful earthquakes in Syria, Palestine, and Asia; more than 500 towns were destroyed, and the loss of life surpasses all calculation.

1137.—Catania, in Sicilia, overturned and 15,000 persons were buried in the ruin.

1158.—In Syria, etc.; 23,000 persons perished.

1268.—In Sicilia; 50,000 perished.

1726, September 1.—Palermo nearly destroyed; nearly 6,000 lives lost.

1731, November 30.—Again in China, and 400,000 people swallowed up at Pekin.

1732, November 29.—In Naples, etc.; 1,940 perished.

1747, October 28.—Lima and Callao demolished; 18,000 persons buried in the ruins.

1754, September.—At Grand Cairo half the houses and 40,000 persons swallowed up.

1755, June 7.—Kaschan, Northern Persia, destroyed; 49,000 perished.

1755, November 1.—The great earthquake at Lisbon. In about eight minutes most of the houses and upwards of 50,000 inhabitants were swallowed up and whole streets buried. The cities of Coimbra, Oporto and Braga suffered dreadfully, and St. Ubes was wholly overturned. In Spain a large portion of Malaga became ruins. One half of Fez, in Morocco was destroyed, and more than 12,000 Arabs perished there. About half the island of Madeira became waste, and 2,000 houses in the island of Mitylene, in the Archipelago, were overturned. This awful earthquake extended 5,000 miles, even to Scotland.

1759, October 30.—In Syria, extended over 10,000 square miles; Balbeek destroyed; 20,000 perished.

1780.—At Tauris; 15,000 houses demolished and multitudes buried.

1783, February 5.—Messina and other towns in Sicily overturned; thousands perished.

1784, July 23.—Eztinghia, near Erzeroum, destroyed, and 5,000 persons buried in its ruins.

1797, February 4.—The whole country destroyed, including Cuzco and Quito; 40,000 people buried in one second.

1805, July 26.—At Frosolone, Naples; 3,000 lives lost.

1812, March 16.—At Caracas; 12,000 perished.

1819, June 16.—Several throughout India; district of Kutch sunk; 2,000 persons buried.

1822.—Aleppo destroyed; about 20,000 perished; shocks on 10th and 13th of August and 5th of September.

1829, March 16.—In Spain; Murcia and numerous villages devastated; 6,000 people perished.

1830, May 26 and 27.—Canton and neighborhood; about 6,000 perished.

1836, July 2 and 3.—Manilla, Philippine Isles; immense destruction of property; about 10,000 persons perished.

1838, August 13—15.—The cities of Arequipa, Iquique, Tacna, and many small towns in Peru and Ecuador, destroyed; about 25,000 lives lost and 30,000 rendered homeless; loss of property estimated at $60,000,000.

1875, May 16—18.—San Jose de Cuesta and other towns near Santander, on the boundary of Colombia, destroyed; about 14,000 lives said to be lost.

1878, April 14.—Cua, Venezuela, nearly destroyed; about 300 killed; loss about $30,000.

1881, March 16.—Severe shocks in South Italy; much destruction and loss of life at Cassamicciola, a town in the Isle of Ischia; 289 houses destroyed, 114 lives lost, about $38,000 loss. March 4th, more destruction by another shock.

1883, April 3.—Scio, the town and several villages destroyed; about 4,000 perished; much destruction ensued; successive shocks, beginning 1:30 p. m.

1883, July 23.—The towns of Cassamicciola, Forio and Lacco Ameno, on the Island of Ischia, in the Bay of Naples, almost entirely destroyed; 1,900 lives lost, and 374 persons injured.

1883, August 26.—The Krakatoa cataclysm in Java, in August, which was the most stupendous on record. An island was shattered and sunk, and sixteen others raised their heads above the surrounding waters. Nearly 100,000 people were buried beneath volcanic debris or swept off the face of the land by the volcanic wave. The floor of the ocean over a wide area to the southeast of Sumatra was raised into a plain above the water and the effects of the general upheaval were felt as far as the American coast of the Pacific.

1884—85.—A long continued series of shocks in the Spanish peninsula, which began on December 26, 1884, and continued with irregular interruptions until the middle of April, 1885. The greatest destruction of life and property was in Andalusia. Altogether 745 persons were killed and 1,485 injured, and 17,000 buildings were more or less damaged. 4,400 of the number being completely wrecked. Widespread destruction and suffering resulted from this visitation.

Towards the close of November there was a renewal of the disturbances, which extended also to the adjacent African coast.

1885.—A series of shocks began in the Vale of Cashmere on May 13th and continued at irregular intervals until the middle of August. The city of Seranagur and numerous villages were almost completely destroyed, thousands of lives were lost and great destruction of crops.

1886, August 28.—In the Morea and the neighboring island of Zante, several villages being completely destroyed and three hundred lives lost.

The Author of "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-Night."

There is perhaps not one person in a hundred but is familiar with the poem "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-Night," and yet there is not one of the hundred who can tell the name of the author. The poem was written nineteen years ago by Rose Hartwick, a Michigan girl, but did not find its way into print for three years afterward. The author was not pleased with her own production, and withheld it from publication. It was her first effort, and was laid away until one day, in an extremity to fulfill an engagement to furnish the Detroit Commercial-Advertiser with a certain amount of copy each week, and not having anything on hand when the demand was made for it, she took the manuscript down from its dusty shelf and sent it to the publisher with instructions to put it in the waste-basket if he didn't think it worth publishing. It was published, however, and in less than a week was copied into all the leading dailies in the country. Miss Hartwick has since married a Mr. Thorp, and now lives at Grand Rapids. On a recent visit to Chicago the Tribune said of her: "She is bright and enterprising in manner, and by no means shows her five and thirty years. She has never written anything of note except her 'Curfew,' but derives quite an income from her children's stories, which she is writing with some success."

The Republican.

The Congressional Convention in the First District of this State, developed a wonderful case of self-abnegation and political honor. Jones, the present incumbent, was opposed by Thompson of Mobile. When the Convention met the Mobile delegation saw that Thompson could not be nominated. The Mobile delegation, abandoning Thompson, cast their solid 26 votes for Dr. McMillan of Monroe. Washington county followed with 5 votes for McMillan. This left him only 6 votes to get in order to secure the nomination. The vote of the Monroe delegation was awaited with breathless interest. Dr. McMillan was himself a member of the Monroe delegation. There lay the glittering prize within its grasp. While the Monroe delegation were consulting there were cries of "stand by you man," name the nominee from your own county." Monroe finally voted, giving a majority of her votes—not to her own citizen, but to Jones, the present congressman. Dr. McMillan himself voted for Jones. This vote secured Jones' nomination. The convention went wild with excitement. Let Dr. McMillan be immortalized in verse and story as a man who can put away personal ambition for the public good and who can stand true to plighted faith and a friend in the face of the greatest temptation. It was understood before the meeting of the Convention that the Monroe delegation were for Jones, and Dr. McMillan was not to be bribed into a breach of good faith for present advantage. That District ought yet to nominate him for congress when he can accept it with honor. He deserves it.

The Congressional Convention of this, the Seventh District, met at Gadsden Wednesday and again nominated Gen. Wm. H. Forney to succeed himself in Congress. The nomination was made by acclamation, Gen. Forney having no opponent for the place. He will not likely have Republican or Independent opposition; but it is should it will not amount to much. This District is overwhelmingly Democratic and Gen. Forney has the full confidence of the Democracy of the District. Few men have been complimented so often by renomination, without opposition, as Gen. Forney has been. The secret lies in the fact that the people have great confidence in his sound judgment, his devotion to the interests of his constituents and his thorough honesty of character. He employs none of the arts of the politician, never descends to demagogic methods, and depends each time alone upon his record to sustain him. The people, recognizing the importance to them of having a Representative thoroughly trained by long service, and acknowledging his ability and integrity repeatedly endorse him, and they do well for themselves when they do it.

The Ladies' Memorial Association of Montgomery will inaugurate a Grand Bazaar, in the city hall that city Nov. 15th, to continue 2 weeks, for the purpose of raising funds for the Confederate Monument. The co-operation of all the counties in the State is desired. For this purpose one vice president from each county in the State was elected at a recent meeting of the Association. The editor of the REPUBLICAN was selected for Calhoun, and notice of the fact is now given in order that any who may wish to contribute in any way to this patriotic enterprise can do so through him. He will possibly go down to Montgomery about that time and would be pleased to make a good report from Calhoun. Let every community in the county do something to raise the fund necessary to build the monument.

The republican plurality in Maine is 13,000 or 20,000 less than 1884. All republican congressmen are elected. The state senate will be composed of twenty-six republicans and five democrats. The last senate was entirely republican. In the house the republicans have gained twelve and lost two, with four in doubt. If the democrats gain all the doubtful districts it will leave net republican gain of six members of the house.

The commissioners for compiling the new code of Alabama met Wednesday in Tuscaloosa. The following gentlemen compose the commission. Robert C. Brickell, Peter Hamilton, John A. Tillman and F. B. Clarke, Jr.

THE SEVENTH DISTRICT.

On Monday, the 11th day of October, 1886, the convention met at 11 a. m. and was called to order by W. R. Dortch, chairman of the Congressional committee, who named as chairman Hon. J. T. Green, of St. Clair county.

On motion W. M. Meeks, of the Times, and W. P. Johnson, of the News, were elected temporary secretaries.

The committee on permanent organization, consisting of one delegate from each county, reported as permanent chairman Robert Bell, of Marshall, and retained the temporary secretaries as permanent.

The chairman, on taking the oath, made some very good and pointed remarks.

Mr. Perkins of Marshall, placed in nomination for Congress Hon. Wm. H. Forney. The motion was amended by nominating Forney by acclamation.

The chair appointed Messrs. Garrett of Calhoun, Johnson of Jullman, and Martin of Etowah, to wait upon Mr. Forney and escort him into the convention.

Gen. Forney was then introduced as having been nominated seven times for the same position.

Forney only made a short speech which was full of good information and eloquent facts. He stated that he stood both in letter and spirit upon the platform as laid down at the Chicago convention.

He mentioned among other facts that it required $290,000,000 to run this government, and that only $190,000,000 was received from the tariff, and that $75,000,000 was paid out for pensions and $50,000,000 for interest.

Resolutions offered by Judge T. A. Walker endorsing Gen. Forney's course in Congress were unanimously adopted.

Gen. Forney will no doubt be elected as there is no opposition. The convention was composed of very fine and able men and was a session both a short while.

Thus ends the labors of the convention, and the Seventh District will again have the big-hearted, large-brained and generous Forney to represent them in the Fifth Congress.

The Advertiser sounds the slogan against the Birmingham protectionists. This is an invigorating sound. The Birmingham public are opposed to Bankhead for congress because he is not devoted to the idea of supporting Birmingham at the expense of other sections. Now it ever the democracy of the state needs to say whether they are willing to truckle and kneel to the iron men of Birmingham. It is a foul political slur for us to permit the protectionists longer to do what they have been doing control and direct our party. If the democratic party stands for anything it stands for an uncompromising opposition to the robbery of the protective tariff. The time has come for us to draw the line between democracy and protectionism. It is well enough to have votes but if the party is to live, it must be willing to lose some votes rather than be an accomplice in the gross political scoundrelism of taking from one man to help another in his business.—Selma Times.

"I see nothing," said Senator Kenna, to indicate discouragement to the democracy. Information received by the committee from all quarters promises active and energetic work by the local organizations, and assures a good working majority in the next house.

Major Burke, of the Times-Democrat, has received a concession of 20,000 square miles of land in Honduras, which he proposes to develop. The land is supposed to be valuable for minerals and fine woods.

Ben Butler has determined not to run for congress this year. Ben has doubtless concluded that it is beneath the dignity of an ex-presidential candidate to be a member of any body that would deign to succeed the 49 congress.

Mr. Gaines, of Marshall county, was bitten by his dog while hunting last week, and in a short time afterward was attacked with hydrophobia and died in great agony.

Master Phil Happel, of Greensboro, gave two young squirrels to a cat expecting her to eat them, and she nursed them instead. The squirrels are growing and the cat is as fond of them as of her kittens.

In a quarrel between Albert Reynolds, colored, and H. A. Watson, white, at Mobile on Wednesday, Reynolds was killed by Watson.

Mr. Blaine can't congratulate himself on the Maine election. His first boom for the presidency, if not a downright failure, at least is no glorious success.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at W. M. Sisk's.

RELIEF! FORTY YEARS A SUFFERER FROM CATARRH. WONDERFUL TO RELATE.

"FOR FORTY YEARS I have been a victim to CATARRH—three-fourths of the time a sufferer from EXERCISING PAINS ACROSS MY FOREHEAD AND MY NOSE-TRILLS. The discharges were so offensive that I hesitate to mention it, except for the good it may do some other sufferer. I have spent a young fortune from my earnings during my forty years of suffering to obtain relief from the doctors. I have tried patent medicines—every one I could learn of—from the four corners of the earth, with no relief. And AT LAST (57 years of age) have met with a remedy that has cured me entirely—made me a new man. I weighed 125 pounds and now weigh 140. I used thirteen bottles of the medicine, and the only regret I have is that being in the humble walks of life I may not have influence to prevail on all catarrh sufferers to use what has cured me.

A DISCOVERY.

(From the Reading Daily Eagle.)
Onions inhaled cause sleep, and repose. The Soldier on his march and the exhausted Iron Worker get great strength from eating the onion. Tie a fresh onion around the neck and bruise it to make its odor thorough and you secure sound sleep from its nightly inhalation.
DANIEL R. CLIMER.
Ex-Mayor of Reading, Pennsylvania, United States of North America.
(For Foreign Lands.)
It will be an act of humanity to the restless, nervous and sick to copy this in your paper—A God-like act.
Have the kindness to send a paper.

THE ONION SECURES SLEEP, REST AND REFRESHMENT.

To the editor of the World, New York.—In Wednesday's issue of your most valuable paper I found Mr. Climer's Discovery. My only son, 7 years old, has just recovered from a malignant attack of scarlet fever, and has kept his parents awake for the last twelve days by his nervous sleeplessness. I tried the simple remedy of tying an onion around his neck last night and found this morning that he had had an undisturbed sleep all night. By giving these lines space in your next issue, you will oblige yours, application in writing and under oath, praying for an order and decree to sell certain lands in said county, situated in this county, for the purpose of dividing among the heirs and distributees of said estate, and on the ground that the same cannot be equitably and beneficially divided by means and bounds. It is therefore ordered that the 15th day of October 1886, be and is hereby appointed a day upon which to hear and determine said application and that notice thereof be given by publication for three successive weeks in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper published in said county, to all persons interested in said lands, and to appear at the Probate Judge's office in the court house in Jacksonville, Ala., on said 15th day of Octo-

TALLADEGA COUNTY.
The Talladega papers all contain fine tributes to the memory of the gifted and lamented Bowdon.

Col. Andrew Cunningham is announced as a candidate for the State Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Bowdon. The friends of Hon. Cecil Brown are also putting his name forward for the same place.

Mr. E. J. Swan, of Plantersville died recently.

The late Col. A. G. Story of Talladega was one of the very dearest and most universally popular men who ever lived in Talladega, says the Talladega papers.

The Talladega Advance pays a fine tribute to the old Tenth Alabama Regiment. The Advance had Mr. Skaggs, one of its bright young editors, on the ground to write up the late re-union of the regiment. In addition to the names of the members of the Regiment present already given by the REPUBLICAN, the Advance prints the following list of soldiers of other commands who were present and joined the line:

ingham.

The Governor has ordered a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Bowdon for the same day of the election of Congressmen in November.

CHEROKEE COUNTY.
At Rush's mill on the Cattooga river near Gaylesville, Cherokee county, Thursday, 20th inst., three brothers by the name of Morgan were drowned; aged from ten to fifteen years. They were all in bathing and one of them got into deep water and was drowned when the other two attempted to rescue him. All three were drowned at once. Their bodies were recovered and all buried in the same grave.

The fall term of Cherokee county circuit court convenes on the 20th instant. There are on the civil docket 191 cases and on the state docket 131 cases. Making a total of 322 cases.—Cherokee Advertiser.

Cherokee is to have another paper called the Coosa River Telephone. It will be edited by Rev.
W. H. Burton. The first number will be issued Oct. 1.

taining gold, silver and copper.
Wm. is about to strike a rich.

ST. CLAIR COUNTY.
The Ashville Argus is very much improved in the make-up of its local news department. This is attributable to the return of that bright boy, Willie Cather, to the paper. He has been absent at school. Willie is going to be a big success as a newspaper man some of these days, if he sticks to the business.

The Springville Mail has been discontinued.

Circuit Court meets in Ashville
Sept. 27th.

Mrs. Duncan, aged 65, died near Ashville Sept. 14th.

of Springville Educational Institute.

Mrs. John Pearson of Branch
ville dropped dead recently.

Mr. Mac, Carter, near Ashville had been missing his chickens and investigated the matter. He found they were being eaten by an immense bull frog. The frog was caught with a chicken's feet sticking out of its mouth.

Protracted meetings at Eden resulted in 23 accessions to the Baptist church and 23 to the Methodist church.

Seventy-seven lots were sold in one week in Eden recently and real estate has risen 200 per cent.

The Government works on Coosa river will soon be in operation again.

The St. Clair Coal Co. have five ovens in operation and their coke promises to be first class. Their ovens were built by Mr. Richard Thomas and are his patent.

The Coosa Coal & Coke Co. have put their coke to a thorough test in a furnace at Chattanooga and it has demonstrated fully that their coke is a first class furnace coke and only a slight grade below the famous Connellsville coke.

The coal companies at Ragland have forced the E. & W. R. R. to run extra trains to carry off their outputs, as the regular trains could not handle all the coal they got out. The Coosa Coal & Coke
Co. get out from 225 to 300 tons alone per day.

An Old Citizen Speaks.
Mr. J. M. Norris, an old resident of Rome, Ga., says that he had been badly troubled with kidney complaint for a great many years and with leucorrhea for three years at this could scarcely walk and had tried many remedies without benefit, and until he began taking Electric Bitters and anointing his hands and feet with Bucklen's Arnica salve. This treatment afforded him great relief and he strongly recommends Electric Bitters to all who suffer with Kidney Complaints, or need a Blood Purifier.

LEAD MINES.
A Company to be Formed to Open up the Mines in Calhoun County, Ala.

The Southern Land and Loan company, of this city, have secured an option on the well known lead mines in Calhoun county, Ala., and propose organizing a company to work the mines for all they are worth.

The mines were worked during the war by the Confederate government and yielded handsomely, though there was no extensive work done. A shaft was sunk in the hill side where the deposit lies,
and extended about forty feet, from which large quantities of the ore, which is rich in product, were taken. There is no doubt of the metal there in large quantities.

If the company should be formed, and there seems to be little doubt of that, as several influential and wealthy men in the state

Cotton is opening rapidly, and farmers, as a general thing, are trying to keep up with it. There are various opinions about the cotton crop. Some say that there will not be over a half crop. Some say three fourths, while others contend that there will be as much as last year, but I hear more complaint about small prices for cotton than anything else.
